GROWTH OF ARIZONA.

Leading Paper Gives Reason for Admission of Arizona.

Arizona has more than doubled its population in the past decade. The census of this year gives the territory 122,212 inhabitants, against 59,620 in 1890. When the census of I890 was taken the Indians on the reservations were not enumerated as inhabitants. There were 28,469 aboriginal wards on these reservations; there are only 3,055 now. The majority of the Apaches have during the past decade been transferred to Florida and Indian Territory in the interests of peace. The policy has born good fruit, Arizona has in consequence filled up with settlers. Life and property are now as secure there as anywhere in the country.

The wonderful growth of population is, however, only one of the grounds on which Arizona will establish its rights to be admitted by congress to statehood.

A large amount of capital has been invested there of late years in mining properties. The territory is one of the most attractive mining fields for capital on the Pacific coast. The climate and geological formations are specially favorable to the industry. In undeveloped mineral wealth Arizona stands peerless in the west. Gold, silver and copper are the leading mineral produts. As a copper producer it will in a few years outrank every other section of the country. Although many of the copper properties there are still undergoing development, they are listed among the biggest dividend paying mines in the United States.

Coincident with all this mining development is a gradual unfolding of agricultural resources, of which the Territory was not considered a few years ago to be possessed. Experience is proving that there are large areas of land in Arizona which can be made highly productive under a proper system of tillage. The arable land are contributing largely toward the support of the present population, and it is not unreasonable to assume that in to investigate it has reported to the time the Territory will be self-support- principal chief of the Cherokee nation live stock. Dos Cabezas.

P B. McCabe of this city returned vesterday from a visit to the Dos Cabezas mines near Willcox, Arizona. He speaks with considerable enthusiasm the outlook of that property which seems to be a very good copper proposition presenting great possibilities.

The Dos Cabezas mine is fourteen miles southeast of Willcox and is now fairly well developed in preliminary work. A ten foot body of 25 per cent copper and another sixty foot body of 3 per cent constitute the discoveries at present, and it is thought these are the United States Court at Columbus, stringers of the main body for which a | O., yesterday by Applrton J. Ide, with tunnel is now being driven. The tun- scheduled liabillities of $146,280; no asnel is 7x5 feet and has been carried in sets. 740 feet.

A lower tunnel cuts in at the 275 foot level but the workings are not yet under the apex where it is expected the largest body is.

Altogether 1720 feet of development work has been done. In the long tunnel three shifts of men are working with Rand drills.

The raise in the tunnel is very small, being only enough to allow the cars to run out. Blowers and steam shoots have prevented the accumulation of bad air, and up to this time no difficulty has arrisen from that cause.

John Cff, of Los Angeles, is president of the Dos Cabezas company and several other local men are interesed.

A large number of spectators were admitted to the enclosed space before noon every care being taken to secure against interruption as the result of any display of feeling or excitement on the part of those who had thus secur ed admission At the hour appointed the condemned men were led from their cell to the Scaffold.

The crowd stood silent in expectation while the two brothers were placed on the scaffold. The men were pale and appeared haggard and worn from their long imprisonment and the anxious suspense, but both were brave and faced their fate with but very little appearance of fear.

They were asked whether they had anything to say and acknowledged in firm tones that the sentence was just.

They admitted their guilt of the crime for which they were thus to suffer a just punishment.

The men about to die then offered up an ardent prayer, asking pardon from their God for the crime for which they were thus to pay the supreme penalty of the law.

After this prayer they prepared to die and at a signal the drop fell and You might not bet on a diamond the bodies of the two brothers were
